

NEED TO DOUBLE CAPACITY OF STOCK SHEDS NEXT YEAR

Fair Was More Successful Than Anyone Expected or Imagined It Would Be

MAY CHANGE THE DATES

There Is a Possibility That the Fair May Be Held in July
Next Year

Although the Exhibition Association had not sufficient time to close their books and no official statement has as yet been prepared, it is estimated that the total attendance for the four days of the fair is 30,000, with total receipts at $22,000, of which entrances amounted to $7,500, Grand Stand $6,500, circus $1,000, and privileges percentages $5,000.

These figures make a record which surpasses those of any event or exhibition ever held in the city of Edmonton, and the directors have the satisfaction of knowing that if the whole four days had been brilliant sunshine like the second day, the totals would have nearly twice the amount that they are.

Need of More Stock Sheds

The exhibition, successful as it has been, has decided beyond doubt that it will be necessary to duplicate all the stock buildings by next year, and increase the space for the machinery exhibits. President Campbell, when speaking on the subject, said that considering the weather, the exhibition had been successful. "Of course," he said, "there will be a deficit. That we have been expecting, but it will not be a large one." Mr. Campbell then went on to say that it would be necessary to erect a duplicate number of stock buildings by next year. "Now we see the wisdom of leaving such large spaces between the houses," he said.

There has been quite a little bit of discussion as to whether or not the date of the fair is not rather late for the part of the country. The general feeling seems to be that the old dates, in the early part of July, are better, and it is quite likely that the fair will be held in July next year. One advantage in this is that the evenings are warm, and then again it would also come before the Calgary fair.

The exhibition has done at least one good thing in the city, in that it has shown up the inadequacy of the street railway to handle anything approaching a large crowd. During the days of the fair the cars to the grounds were so full that the passengers were standing room, while at the same time the Strathcona service was neglected, many of the Strathcona visitors to the fair being compelled to walk over to Edmonton rather than wait an hour for a car that in all probability would not be overcrowded.

Ten thousand persons took meals at the main dining hall during the fair bringing in a revenue of $5,000. On the whole the catering was adequate, except for the second day, when it was impossible between 6 and 7 p.m. to get a meal for free or money.

"Extremely successful," says Mayor Lee, when expressing his opinion on the Edmonton Fair. "The weather of course, gave a general set back to the exhibition," said the Mayor. "In the few days preceding the fair had been fine and allowed the grounds time to dry up, the attendance would have been twice what it was."

The exhibition was exceedingly well managed and proved a greater success than I expected.

"There is no doubt," the Mayor went on, "that there is a lot of work to be done on the grounds before next year, and if there is a deficit, well—we couldn't possibly expect to make it pay the first year."

Mr. Joseph Driscoll, who was on the race committee, began with the speech when giving his opinion of the fair. When he got through he said that he thought the fair had been a success. The programme was good and if there had only been fine weather again and the reporter who was interviewing him came away in a hurry.

Mr. Belcher, brother of Col. Belcher, who visited the exhibition several times, said that he thought the fair was a great success. "In spite of the weather," he said, "every thing has gone off very well. I thought at first that the rain on Tuesday would have spoiled the whole fair, but under the able management, and the happy idea of postponing the opening day, it has been a great success." Mr. Belcher thought that the exhibits were exceedingly good and that the manufacturers of the city had come forward in fine style to show what Edmonton could do.

Better Than Wildest Dreams.

The director in charge of the housing and shipping arrangements for the stock, Mr. T. Tims, expressed his opinion to the Capital reporter on Saturday that the fair had been a success beyond the wildest dreams. Further, Mr. Tims said that all the exhibitors with whom he had come in contact had expressed their satisfaction with the whole fair and the arrangements and accommodation that had been made for them.

"I have spoken to a lot of experienced exhibition men," said Mr. Tims, "men who have been going the round of the fairs for many years, and also to many of the race horse owners, who have been travelling round with their horses, and they are all commended the exhibition and the grounds as one of the best that they had visited."

Everyone who has anything to do with the fair speaks in the same vein, and many are the prophecies for the future. The general opinion of the public and the officials is that in three years time Edmonton will have an exhibition that will be second to none in the west, and will compare favorably with the big exhibitions of the east.

The J. K. Cornwall party of journalists and boards of trade men who have been touring the Peace River country, are expected to arrive back in the city this afternoon. COMPENSATION FOR MOTHER

At the City Commissioners' meeting on Saturday morning a communication was received from Thomas Jones, brother of Robert Jones, the city lineman who was electrocuted a short time ago while working on the wires at the corner of First Street and Peace Avenue, in which he states that he was pleased with the way the funeral arrangements were carried out. In speaking of the compensation, on account of his brother's death, he states that he had left the arrangements for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act in the hands of Sup. Ormsby, of the electric light department, and that he desired the amount to be paid to be submitted to his mother. He does not desire to retain a lawyer, or have his mother troubled with an early settlement be reached.

Mr. S. Smith, advertising manager of the Winnipeg Free Press, and Mrs. Smith, are holidaying in Edmonton.

SEND ENGINEERS TO THE ATHABASCA

City Will Send Experts to Grand Rapids to Investigate the Power Scheme

SEND LETTER TO OTTAWA

But Will Not Be Able to Apply for Rights Until After the Investigation

According to a lettergram sent by Commissioner Bouillon, to the secretary of the Department of Interior, at Ottawa, the city intends to send engineers to Big Island, Grand Rapids, on the Athabasca River, very shortly, to investigate the proposal to establish a hydro-electric plant at that point. The city had correspondence with the Ottawa authorities in January, when the scheme was first thought of. At that time, the way was clear for the securing of rights by the city, but the commissioners wish to be assured definitely that the same conditions exist now.

Under the Dominion water power regulations, any such proposal as the city has under consideration, must be submitted to Ottawa for approval, but all data and the preliminary plans have been forwarded to Ottawa, the application of the city for rights will not be considered.

Engineer Fielding, the man with whom Commissioner Bouillon has held conferences on the subject, is at present in Calgary. No definite offer, however, to make a report on the proposal was made to him, while he was here.

BUILDING STRIKE IS VERY COMPLETE

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 29.—Secretary Dixon, of the Builders Exchange, declared there is no change in the situation and is unable to estimate the number who will start work tomorrow. The new national union officers are busy enrolling men to start to-day. Their contract calls for a nine hours day at 2½ cents advance on the international union rate. The latter calls for eight hour day at 6½ cents from January 1, 1911, but the nationalists claim eight hours is too short on account of the illness of the winter season.

International officers state that many men signing the new union roll, had no serious intentions and would be found absent when time came to start work. It stated that there never had been a strike where men stuck so well together and there is no incentive to act otherwise.

Incidentally it is said that those involved in the alleged hoax are laying the basis of an avalanche of libel suits.

RIDEAU HALL TOO COSTLY

Its Upkeep and Improvement
Runs Away With Too Much
Government Money

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—Now that the Duke of Connaught is coming to Canada as Governor General, it is reported that the government is seriously considering the advisability of building a new residence for the Governor General in Ottawa, as the present residence of the Governor General in Ottawa has about outlived its usefulness and that the plans are already under way for the erection of a new Rideau Hall on a new site.

The site of the new residence is declared to be the high bluff along the Ottawa river. These properties constitute some 40 acres of land and the situation is one of the finest in Canada. A magnificent view of the country for miles around may be obtained from the crest, and altogether the site is an ideal one for an executive residence. The owners of the properties are already aware of the intention of the government to acquire the site, but no intimation of the appropriation has, it is said, yet been made officially to them.

Just how much land may be taken in to complete the new Rideau Hall grounds is variously estimated. One report is to the effect that all the lots and buildings will be taken. This would practically wipe out the village of Rockcliffe as regards population, and mean the expenditure of a very large sum as several splendid residences have been erected during the last year or two within this area. The whole scheme has been discussed by the government, and previous to its departure for the West, it is understood, Sir Wilfrid Laurier approval of the idea as regards the expropriation of the high bluff overlooking the Ottawa.

The present Rideau Hall, formerly the home of Hon. Thomas McKay, has been an expensive item for many years. Nearly a million dollars has been expended on repairs, additions and improvements and the end is not yet. For years the expense account of

CRIPPEN AND TYPIST FACE MURDER CHARGE

BOTH THE NOTORIOUS DOCTOR AND MISS LE NEVE
ACCUSED OF MURDER OF BELLE ELMORE—GIRL
CHARGED WITH HIDING CRIPPEN—APPEAR IN BOW STREET POLICE COURT.

London, Aug. 29.—Both Hawley H. Crippen, the American doctor, and Clara Ethel Levene, his typist, were accused of the murder of Belle Elmore, the former's wife, in the formal charge read to them in the Bow Street police court today. Miss Levene was charged also with harboring and assisting Crippen after the crime and while knowing that he committed it.

During the proceedings Inspector Dew, who brought the prisoners back from Canada, introduced evidence that Crippen contemplated suicide while at sea, following his flight from this country. Crippen was quoted as also declaring that his companion knew nothing of the trouble in which he was involved, and Miss Levene is said to have protested her innocence.

Are Authorities Satisfied
There was special interest in the character of the formal charge as the warrant for the arrest of the fugitive had merely laid out the door, leaving possibility for the death of an unknown woman whose body was found in the cellar of the Crippen house at Hillard Crescent. The fact that both were today accused of the murder of Belle Elmore, the actress, wife of the doctor, leads to the supposition that the mutilated body had been identified to the satisfaction of the authorities.

It also suggests that the police have more evidence concerning Miss Levene's connection with the tragedy than they have made known heretofore. Today's proceedings consisted of the introduction of evidence against the accused at the close of which they were remanded until September 6th without having pleaded or made any comment of the charge against them. Few persons except those connected with the case were admitted to the police court.

Doesn't Like Canadian Reporters
London, Aug. 29.—Inspector Dew's comments on the methods of transatlantic journalists are highly amusing, although somewhat pungent with feeling. He declared that it was quite a pleasure to meet English pressmen once more, as they were gentlemen.

Immediately after Judge Marshall took his seat today, at Bow Street police court, Crippen and Ethel Levene entered the court. Crippen's moustache was freshly grown and gray hairs were plainly visible in his stubble beard. Miss Levene wore a heavy blue veil, which she raised on answering the magistrate. Crippen and the girl were calm and collected. They listened intently to the proceedings. They leaned on the dock rail, quite at their ease while Inspector Dew was giving evidence as to the arrest. Crippen leaned forward and spoke to Newton, Dew's counsel. The latter asked Dew if the prisoners had been arrested by him on July 31 and Dew replied that they were really arrested by the Canadian police. Replying further to Newton, Dew said the prisoners had been absolutely calm and tranquil. Newton's request to be allowed to see the depositions was refused.

SPENT 2 MONTHS LOOKING FOR LAND IN THE STATES, THEN HE CAME TO CANADA

Apologies the present American campaign of slander to injure Canada it is interesting to hear some of the experiences of landseekers who come to Edmonton. A group of three that pored over the map in the office of the Immigration Hall this morning, two had travelled all through the Northwestern States. One son of old Ontario, weary of wandering, was glad to return to Canada. He has been trying to locate land for settlement across the border, but found it impossible.

"I drove all the way from Ogden, Utah, to Great Falls, Minnesota, and was not able to find any suitable land, so when I heard of free land up here I decided to come north," said he.

"Oh, well," he continued, "when told of the difficulties of clearing the land and cultivating, I want just a small farm of a quarter section to work the way my father worked his back in Ontario. It was only a small farm, but he brought up a family of twelve and gave us all lots to eat and wear and had a few thousand dollars at his death. If I can do as well here I shall be satisfied."

MANY COMPLAINTS ABOUT THE PHONES

There have been a considerable number of complaints recently in regard to the telephone service, some of which have come to the ears of the City Commissioners, besides the fact that in the city offices there has also been considerable difficulty with the telephones in the past month. It is thought that the severe electric storm which occurred about a month ago, had much effect upon the system and it has not yet recovered from the damage done to wires, etc.

In the past the City Commissioners have not been kept in touch to any extent with the operations of the telephone department, with the exception of financial statements, and so on, but in the future the commissioners will receive a weekly report of all complaints, and other matters pertaining to the department. Superintendent Griffiths, of the telephone department has been notified to that effect.

ESKIMOS SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

Took the Afternoon Game By Heavy Hitting, But Lost Evening Session by Close Score

(Special to the Capital)
Calgary, Aug. 28.—Edmonton broke even with Calgary on Saturday by taking the matinee game by a seven-to-two score and losing the evening game by a one-nothing tally. Dellar pitched the first game for the Eskimos. He was in better shape than when he was pounded out of the box, the first day he met the Carnegies, and on Saturday he held them down to six scattered hits while the Eskimos touched Goebel for seven hits, and he was replaced by Drechko, the former Edmonton twirler, the Eskimos pounded the new man five times, making twelve hits in all. It was very heavy hitting that gave the Deacons this game.

Mills a Corker
Young Mills is performing exceptionally well. In the two games he was nine times up and made six hits, one by bagger and one by bunter, walked once and went down on an error once. He was eight times on the first sack and scored two runs in the matinee game all of which is going some.

The evening game was a pitcher's battle with Pete Standridge and Hueston doing the flinging. Calgary's one run was scored in the second but outside of this the eighth was the only chance Hueston gave the locals yet gave a look in but they failed to connect again.

Pete Standridge had the Indian sign on all the Edmonton batters excepting Rubie Mills. He held the Eskimos to five hits, three of which fell to Mills, while Hueston held the locals down to seven hits altogether.

Four men only were walked by the two pitchers, and altogether the game was the closest and best yet in the series. There was never an inning that the Eskimos did not look like scoring, and several times Standridge was called upon to work himself out of tight places. He always responded and on one or any other occasion he got a man across the plate.

MORE HOT AIR FROM CALGARY

The Papers in That City Exhibit Consummate Nerve—Hear "Mr." Middleton Speak

The Calgary Alberta and Herald are absolutely sickening these days and are emitting such a hot breath of hot air and general hyperics that has ever been seen in Alberta journalism. The Edmonton-Lethbridge series is still sticking in their throats and they have ripped Manager Rowland into the controversy. In our opinion, one of the more highly intellectual friend of Charlie Connelly's business, so we are not worrying very much whether he likes it or not. Let him keep on beating Regina, Brandon, etc., on the Winnipeg grounds, and pretending he has a hell team, but leave Calgary and Edmonton to themselves.

Probably now that Calgary has won the first two games from Edmonton they will be able to sleep at night. But it is really funny to read the Alberta's accounts of the games. "Wheeler was the best umpire ever," and last week they nearly killed him! "Carney will take six out of seven," and other pipe dreams. Then the fans are incited to practically mob Slim Dellar. O. they are a fine bunch of sports in the new town.

The following extract from the Herald, for cool nerve, takes the bun: "The post-series games must be played in Calgary," President Hall Middleton says last night for public information. "Calgary will play at all if they are arranged otherwise. The Calgary team are out to win the pennant on the square, and the team management will not tolerate even the suspicion of crookedness from Edmonton." "Calgary will play at all if they are arranged otherwise. The Calgary team are out to win the pennant on the square, and the team management will not tolerate even the suspicion of crookedness from Edmonton."

GREAT BIG HATS FOR THE WOMEN

Some of the Size of Umbrellas Are Dictated by the Milliners

SMALL ONES YET SMALLER
None of Medium Size, But One Extreme or the Other

Chicago, Aug. 28.—There is no relief in sight for women who have accepted the dictates of fashion and have accepted the unwieldiness of hats of the size of an umbrella. That is the edict of the National Association of Retail Milliners, which is holding its annual convention here.

Big hats are to be bigger, and small hats smaller than ever before. There are to be no medium-sized hats. The desire for extremes extends even to the coloring, according to Alice Mazer, president of the association. The more brilliant the coloring the more nearly to the ideal effect will the new hat conform.

New shades will include magnolia, a shade of orange; dahlia, a coral red; poppy, a dead rose; henna, a light mahogany; and acacia, a raisin color.

SPAIN AND LATIN AMERICA.

A Spanish Professor Says that Spain's Foreign Policy should Face Two

Muzzi, disappointed but not heartbroken, promptly informed his son that he would have to marry Philomena, who also had a lover. The cousin feigned acquiescence, but on the morning he was to be married the younger Muzzi committed suicide.

Philomena was married on the same day to Antonio Guidicelli, who immediately after the ceremony called his friends together, read Muzzi's post-mortem, and carried off a number of cattle.

Antonio, his bride, and his friends were tried at Bastia, but all were acquitted with the exception of Antonio who was sentenced to eight months' imprisonment.

The British Columbia Prospector

A Weird Story From Dawson City of Strange Occurrences in the Land of the Midnight Sun

Ten years ago when I was camped a mile below what is now Dawson City, when the Arctic summer, with its monotonous daylight, was about drawing to a close, a terrific thunder storm came along one night; the wind blew a hurricane, shifted all round the compass many times, lashed the river into foam and snipped off the trees round the camp like carrots. The lightning was close to us and very vivid; the thunder roared and re-roared again and again far away in the mountains.

It was appalling and almost induced the timid ones to temporarily register a vow to lead a better life in future. A few days after these fireworks, I was visited one evening by a huge giant, a typical prospector, and as fine a specimen of a man as you could hope to come across in an ordinary lifetime.

Handsome of face, bright-eyed, tall, straight-limbed, broad in the chest, spare in the flank, this magnificent human creature came crashing through the underbrush like a moose. After the manner of his kind he nodded to me, sat down, and then slowly filled his pipe and proceeded to unburden himself of his tale of woe.

"Pardner, said he, 'you ain't afraid of ghosts, are ye?' As it was considered infra dig in that country to be afraid of anything, I assured him that I was the proud possessor of unlimited courage, and had no more nerve than I could conveniently pack.

"Well, pardner, it's like this. I've brought a dead man down here to stay with yer awhile; I've got him in a box; I've tied him up down under them bushes, and if yer don't mind I'll leave him there for a bit." I assured him that any friend of his was most welcome, dead or alive, but ventured to suggest that as the weather was still warm, perhaps a funeral would be appropriate. "Pardner, yer needn't be the least mite skeered. John will keep all night—why, he's guaranteed for thirty days." Then came the particulars of the tragedy.

It appeared that the deceased and my newly-found friend were, as the remarked "sort of dead pardners," and were prospecting away up the Eldorado Gulch.

On the night of the big storm they had arrived, and the funeral was ordered for two o'clock that afternoon. The regular old miner dearly loves a funeral. To him it is an event not to be neglected.

The sad event is announced by crude notices posted on trees in conspicuous places, and the solemnity of the occasion is highly appreciated and most impressive.

The virtues of the deceased are generally discussed in low tones, and his many good qualities often exaggerated.

The day of the funeral I was formally invited to be present at the obsequies, but was obliged to decline. The ghost prospector, who by this I had christened "Gabriel Conroy," then suggested that I should send a couple of my men in canoes to follow the boat containing the canned gentleman, remarking quite pathetically, "I think, pardner, that will make a kind of nice impression—like, don't you?"

The ceremony came off exactly as planned, and was a great success. I saw Gabriel once and twice afterwards, when he thanked me most profusely for my share in the proceedings, which consisted principally in not being scared of ghosts and taking care of "him."

The heaven-born prospector, i.e., the genuine article, is the most hopeful and the most confident creature in the universe. Failure simply whets his appetite and encourages him to seek fresh fields. The most appalling obstacles only increase his desire to penetrate the inaccessible, with the off chance of discovering the hiding place of the precious metal.

Inured to hardships all his life, and anticipating nothing better, he religiously pursues the oft unulated vagaries of his calling without a murmur. Theories, born of long experience are constantly exploded, which makes no difference to him; he patiently plods along, working hard to discover the great secret of nature, living a hard life, and often dying a hard death, "unwept, unmonored, unsung."

Once I asked Gabriel how it was that he had never become rich. He quickly assured me that once he had discovered a mine in Colorado, and "sold her for forty-seven thousand dollars cash." I wondered why he didn't hang on to it and retire, to which he replied with childish innocence: "Well, pardner, I jest tell yer exactly how it was with us prospectors the time I sold that mine and got all that money. I thought: I was a great big son of a gun, but I wanted to be—great big son of a gun, so I took that money and I blowed it all in on a quartz lode in Idaho, which wasn't worth a cuss, so I lost the whole pile."—"See," in Toronto Star Weekly.

LONDON'S LATEST FAD

Carriages and motor cars for shopping and short distance visits for the time in the disfavor, and the latest fad is to walk.

The manager of a well-known Bond street shop told the Daily Mirror recently that he had noticed during the last few months a growing number of persons, particularly women, shopping "on foot" instead of driving.

"One of the reasons for this new fad," he added, "is that owing to the large number of cancelled society engagements, women have, for the first time in their lives plenty of time to shop with leisure and comfort."

"Usually during the season shopping is often a wild rush round town in a carriage or car, with no time except to buy necessities."

"Once tried, the habit of shopping on foot has been found to be both restful and pleasing. It is a new cure for jaded nerves, and is likely to become more and more fashionable. People, I think, will not give it up even when the rush of engagements begins again. They will make time to walk."

"Walking is, of course, a most healthful exercise," a well known doctor told the Daily Mirror.

"It would be a good thing for the national health if everybody tried to walk a little more instead of always riding in omnibuses or tubes,"—London Daily Mirror.

His Choice.

There came to the home of a negro Tennesseean an addition to the family in the shape of triplets. The proud father hailed the first man who came along the road and asked him to see them. Then, who was an Irishman, seemed greatly interested in the infants as he looked them over, lying in a row before him.

"Well," pointing to the one in the middle, "I think I'd save that one."

Stories of Sea Superstitions

A GREAT MANY OLD SAILORS STILL CLING TENACIOUSLY TO THEIR BELIEF IN SIGNS AND PORTENTS.

It is a well known fact that in the past the sailor was among the most superstitious of mortals, and even in these enlightened days there are a goodly number of old salts who cling tenaciously to their belief in certain signs and portents. Some, no doubt, of these superstitions have vanished altogether into the limbo of forgotten things, but there will always be a credulous few who will shake their heads solemnly and prophesy distantly if a knife is stuck in the mast, or an allatross or a stormy petrel is captured and brought on board. The origin of some of these superstitions cannot be traced. Many of them have been handed down from father to son for a great number of years, with a touch probably added here and there, turning a comparatively ordinary story into a weird and mysterious legend.

Very likely (says the London Globe) the seaman's isolation from outside influence, and the weeks and months spent at sea with only his mates for company, served to foster superstitious notions in the days of sailing vessels; while the general spread of knowledge works but slowly in these ocean matters, concerning which Jack is peculiarly unreasoning. The Finn is the most superstitious of all sailors. There are many of this race who still believe in the ominous portent of the phantom ship, the folly of starting a voyage on a Friday (a notion by no means confined to seafaring men), the ghost spirits hovering near to give warning of approaching disaster and many other things, all of which fill the sailor's mind with murmurings. And speak to him of wrecks.

A story is told of a brigantine which numbered several extremely superstitious men among her crew. One night when there was no moon and a slight ground-swell was running, the watch, who happened to be the most superstitious of them all, heard an unearthly wailing coming apparently from the very surface of the sea. The mate and the helmsman also heard it, but the former lacked imagination, and although he was certainly interested, he nearly blew the watch's head off when he ventured to suggest mermaids. The helmsman did not feel quite happy, but he had to stick to the wheel. The watch was pale with terror, but he kept silence owing to the mate's complimentary reference to his courage and abilities. Slowly the sound began to move along the ship's side, becoming more and more agonising as it approached. This annoyed the mate, and going to the side of the vessel he waited until he had located the sound, and then emptied a bucket of water over the rail. There was a gasp, and then dead silence, and nothing more was heard that night.

When the watch went off duty he, of course, gave a detailed and lurid account of the incident to his shipmates, who listened on he thought in awed silence, and then called on one of the audience for his version of the matter. This man, a Tyneider, who dearly loved a joke, and had no respect at all for hoary superstitions, had conspired with his fellows to play a trick on the watch. On the night in question he had crept over he bows without a sound, carrying with him the ship's cat, secured in a bag. Crouching under the stays, the joker let the cat's head out of the bag, which he tied around the animal's neck so that it could not escape. He then applied his teeth to the unfortunate animal's tail. Everybody knows the fearsome sound an angry cat is capable of producing, and those to which a cat whose tail is being bitten gives vent are among the most hair-raising. The sound was more or less regulated by squeezing the luckless beast's body. The mate's bucket of water was as unwelcome as unexpected, and caused the Tyneider to beat a hurried retreat.

Not only is the origin of many sea superstitions "wrapped in mystery" but also any logical explanation of cause and effect. It would puzzle anyone to say why it should be unlucky for the ship's boy to whistle on the weather bow, except that it is generally unpleasant from a music lover's point of view for a boy to whistle on any bow at all. Nor would it be easy to explain why a sneeze to starboard presages disaster and why should the squeaking of a pig at night be considered an evil omen? At the mere sight of an overturned hatch, many a seaman will declare that another ship has gone to the bottom, and he will say the same should the salt box or the "cracker barge" (English biscuit box), he upset.

On one occasion superstition and a guilty conscience caused a practical joke to have fatal consequences. The incident arose through one of the sailors, a Norwegian, boxing the ears of the ship's boy for the aforementioned crime of whistling on the weather bow. Not unnaturally the boy was annoyed, and determined to play the Norwegian out. Aided by two other sailors a white shirt and some string, a very presentable "ghost" was arranged in the fo'c'sle on the night the Norseman was on watch. He was to be allowed only a glimpse of the "spirit" on entering the fo'c'sle, and it was then to vanish from view, being jerked by means of a string underneath the bunk of one of the jokers. Everything was ready, and the three conspirators lay in their bunks waiting their victim. Unfortunately they all fell asleep to be suddenly awakened by a loud cry from the Norwegian. He stood staring at the "ghost" the dim light shed by lamp falling on his ghastly face. The three were a bit: to call out to him when he spoke "No, no," he cried, "I did not mean to kill you, Master! Oh, my mercy!"—and he rushed madly from the fo'c'sle. Terrified his shipmates followed him, but as they reached the deck they saw the Norwegian throw himself into the sea.

are now Harry was pursuing over the scouring of the last evening. Prendergast looked the orderly interior over on the threshold with a contemptuous amusement. "Almost thought I was in church," he said. He took off his coat and lazily watched the other cook the frugal evening meal.

"Excuse my not volunteering," he observed. "You do it so nicely I'm almost afraid you'll have another attack of that forgetfulness of yours and go back to the old line."

Presently he looked at the bunk, clean and spriggy with fresh out spruce shoots. He went into it, knelt down and thrust an arm into the empty space beneath it. He got up hastily.

"What have you done with that?" he demanded, with an angry snarl. "With what?" Harry turned his head as he set two tin plates on the bare table.

"With what was under here." "There was nothing there but an old horse skin," said Harry. "It is hanging on the side of the cabin."

With an oath Prendergast dung upon the door and went outside. He entered quickly with the white hide in his arms, wrapped it in a blanket and thrust it back under the bunk.

"Has any one been here today since you put it out there?" he asked quickly. "No," said Harry, surprised. "Why?"

Prendergast chuckled. The chuckle grew to a puff, and he sat down, slapping his thigh. Presently he went to the wall, took the chains skin bag from his hiding place and poured some of its yellow contents into his palm.

"That's why. Do you remember that, eh?" Harry looked at it. "Gold dust," he said. "I seem to recall that. I am going to begin work in the trench tomorrow. There should be more where that came from."

Prendergast poured the gold back into the bag with a cunning look. The other had asked for no share of it. At that moment he decided to say nothing of the evening before, of the girl or the horseback journey, lest Hugh, cupping his brains, might remember he had been offered a half.

"There's plenty more where that came from, all right," he said, and I'll teach you again how to get it out of these days."

Prendergast said little during the meal. When the table was cleared he lit his pipe and took from a shelf a board covered with penciled figures and scrutinized it.

"Hope you remember how to play old solitaire?" he said.

Harry did not move. As they are he had been wondering how long he could abide that sinister presence. As he was about to speak a knock came at the cabin door, and Prendergast opened it.

The visitor Harry recognized instantly. It was the man who had called for fair play at the fight before the saloon, who had drawn him into the hotel.

Felder carried a bundle under his arm. He nodded curtly to Prendergast and addressed himself to Harry.

"I am the bearer of a gift from some one in the town," he said. "I have been asked to deliver this to you." He put the bundle into the other's hands.

Harry drew up one of the chairs hastily. "Please sit down," he said courteously. He looked at the bundle curiously. "It's one damn fortune," he said slowly. "A gift from some one in the town?"

A loose surprise flashed into the lawyer's glance. "The quotation is lawyer's glance. The quotation is lawyer's glance."

"With what was under here." "There was nothing there but an old horse skin," said Harry. "It is hanging on the side of the cabin."

With an oath Prendergast dung upon the door and went outside. He entered quickly with the white hide in his arms, wrapped it in a blanket and thrust it back under the bunk.

"Has any one been here today since you put it out there?" he asked quickly. "No," said Harry, surprised. "Why?"

"Hope you remember how to play old solitaire?" he said.

er began to speak. His voice was unsteady as he answered: "I appreciate it, I am deeply grateful, but it is quite impossible that I accept it from him."

"You need not hesitate," said the lawyer. "Old Despair needs it no longer. He died last night in Devil's dance hall, where he played when he was sober enough for his lodging. I happened to be near by, and I assure you it was his express wish that I give the violin to you."

Rising, he held out his hand. "Good night," he said. "I hope your memory will soon return. The town is much interested in your case."

The flush grew deeper in Harry's cheek, though he saw there was nothing ironical in the remark. "I scarcely knew he touched," he replied. "I am learning that forgetfulness has its advantages."

Chapter 17

THE little town had been unconsciously grateful for its new sensation.

The return of Hugh Stires and his apparent curious transformation was the prime subject of conversation. For a half year the place had known but one other event as startling. That was the finding some months before of a dead body—that of a comparative stranger in the place—thrust beneath a thicket on Smoky Mountain, on the very claim which now held Prendergast and his partner.

The "amen corner" of the Mountain Valley House had discussed the pros and cons extensively. There were many who sneered at the loss of memory and took their cue from Devil, who, smarting from his humiliation and nursing venom, revamped suspicions wherever he showed his battered face. In his opinion Hugh Stires was "playing a slick game."

"Your view is colored by your prejudices, Devil," said Felder. "He's been a blackleg in the past—granted. But give the devil his due. As for the other ugly tale, there's no more evidence against him than there is against you or me!"

"They didn't find the body on my ground," had been the other's surly retort, "and I didn't clear out the day before either."

The phenomenon, however, whether credited or discredited, was a draw-bank card. More than a few found occasion to climb the mountain by the hillside trail that skirted the lonely cabin. These as likely as not saw Prendergast lounging in the doorway smoking, while the younger man worked, leading a trench along the brow of the hill to bring the water from its intake, which Harry's quick eye had seen was practicable.

The spectacle of Hugh Stires, who had been used to pass his days in the saloons and his nights in even less becoming resorts, turned practical, added a touch of open bourse to the situation that to a degree mediated the rigor of discipline. It was the consensus of opinion that the new Hugh Stires seemed vastly different from the old; that if he were "playing a game" it was a curious one.

On the one side was a black record, exemplified in Prendergast—clouded infancy, a shuddering abhorrence of his past self as he saw it through the plagues lens of public opinion; on the other was a grim constancy of purpose, a passionate will to reconstruct the warped structure of life of which he found himself the tenant, days of heedful peace inspiring him, a woman's face that threatened his every thought. As he wielded his pick in the trench or laboriously washed out the few glistening grains that now were to mean his daily sustenance he turned often to gaze up the slope where, set in its foliage, the glass roof of the sanitarium sparkled softly through the Indian haze. Strange that the sight should mysteriously suggest the face that haunted him!

Prendergast saw the abstracted regard as he came up the trail from the town. He was in an ugly humor. The bag of gold dust which he had shown to Harry he had not returned to the hiding place in the wall, and with this in his pocket the fare table had that day tempted him. The pouch was empty now.

Harry's back was toward him, and the gold pan in which he had been washing the gravel lay at his feet. With a noiseless, mirrorless laugh Prendergast stole into the cabin and reached down from the shelf the bottle into which each day Harry had poured his scanty findings. He weighed it in his hand—almost two ounces, a little less than $20. He hastily took the empty bag from his pocket.

But just then a shadow darkened the doorway, and Harry entered. He saw the action and, striding forward, took the bottle from the other's hand.

Prendergast turned on him, a sinister snarl under his affection of surprise. "Can't you attend to your own me killings?" he growled. "I guess I've got a right to what I need."

"Not to that," said Harry quietly. "We shall touch the bottom of the four sack tomorrow. You expect to get your meals here, I presume."

HAS TSAI TAO CUT OFF HIS PIGTAIL

If So It Means a Revolution in China—To Lose Queue Formerly Was a Disgrace

London, Aug. 27.—A Peking correspondent writes that Prince Tsai Tao, the chief of the Chinese military mission which has spent two months in visiting the principal European countries, has cut off his pigtail.

The news was received with delight at Peking by the officers of the Chinese army, who feel sure that the Prince, who is their commander-in-chief, means to give them permission to follow his example.

If the report should prove true it will mean that a revolution has begun. The army, no doubt, will follow his example, and though the military caste is not so important in China as it is in some western countries, it is yet influential. When the immemorial queue disappears China will be a new land.

The pigtail has always been one of the Chinaman's most cherished possessions, and its removal, as in the case of criminals, has hitherto been regarded as the profoundest degradation.

Celestials who reside abroad generally keep their queues tacked into their hats, which it is etiquette to wear at all times, especially indoors. But many of the Chinese students have adopted the close crop, along with their foreign costume, and the news that the pigtail is no longer necessary in their native land will be welcome.

CRIPPEN CHEERFUL

London, Aug. 27.—Wireless messages received here from the Magmatic say that the trip of Crippen and Miss Le Nere has been without incident so far. They are allowed on the promenade deck only at night, when Crippen is allowed to take his walk handcuffed to a detective. The prisoners are amply supplied with reading matter, but anything likely to facilitate suicide is vigilantly barred, otherwise they are treated like first class passengers. Crippen seems cheerful and sleeps well, and both are anxious to evade public curiosity.

GROWTH OF THE WARSHIP

The newly launched Ersatz Frithjof, Germany's tenth Dreadnought, replaces the old battleship Frithjof, built in 1897, which has become obsolete under the twenty year limit imposed in Germany in reckoning the efficiency of battleships. A comparison of the new and old ships is interesting.

NOT A BONE WAS BROKEN

Intoxicated Halifax Engineer Fell 100 Feet at Niagara Falls

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 27.—John Kelley, a Halifax marine engineer, fell nearly one hundred feet over the river bank and was picked up on the lower bank without one bone broken, though he was badly shaken up and had internal injuries, it is feared. Kelley spent yesterday with friends in Welland. He came here last night and drank freely.

IMPERIAL LIMITED DITCHED

North Bay, Aug. 27.—The Imperial Limited, the C.P.R. express east-bound, was ditched near Cartier this morning by a misplaced switch and delayed six hours. Passengers received a severe shaking up and a man in the colonist car en route from Winnipeg to Ottawa was slightly injured but able to continue his journey.

MODERN LIFE WOULD BE TOO HARD ON THE NERVES IF IT WERE NOT FOR WANT ADVERTISING!

The pace of life has become tense.

Worries, disappointments, upsets at home and office, losses, discouragements seem to multiply as daily life becomes more complex.

The property owner, who MUST have a steady income from rents or lose his property, is "racked" by the untimely defection of a tenant. Some classified advertising quickly retrieves his loss—and quiets his nerves!

The salary earner unexpectedly loses his position—and his peace of mind. The strain would shortly "break" something in his nervous system if, once more, want advertising did not find the better job—and restore to him his mental equilibrium.

In every phase of the city's life, every day, the want ads play the part of the peace-maker. They SERVE you and me at some crisis in our lives—and keep the modern pace and tension from proving too fast and tight for us.

Truly, the want ads ARE FOR SERVICE!

About Town

An accident which nearly proved fatal occurred on Saturday evening at Clover Bar. The City of Edmonton was returning from her usual trip when in the darkness she ran over a punt containing four men. The boat was stopped as soon as possible, and fortunately all the men were picked up none the worse off for their ducking.

The Irish Athletic Association held a dance Friday night in the separate school. About 175 people gathered to enjoy the evening which was spent with music and dancing. To Mr. Dave McCullough and his able band of supporters is due the credit of planning and managing this pleasurable event.

DOING ALL THEY CAN

In reference to a letter which appeared in a local contemporary this morning criticizing the negligence of Commissioner Bouillon and Medical Health Officer Whitelaw in regard to the manure at the bottom of the bank on Grieson street, both Dr. Whitelaw and Commissioners Bouillon stated to a Capital reporter this morning that every effort was being made to alleviate the nuisance.

"Besides," said Mr. Bouillon, "the nuisance at the bottom of the bank is not nearly as great as the one created by a certain stable on the top, which is a disgrace to the city."

DEATH OF MADAM LATULIPPE

Aged French-Canadian Pioneer Who Came to This District 26 Years ago, Died Yesterday

The death of Madame Joseph Latulippe (nee Elizabeth Harnois), took place yesterday morning at her home on the St. Albert road. The deceased was 71 years of age, and had come to this part of the country in 1884, with her husband and family from St. Leon County of Masskoning, P.Q. At that time there was no railway line from Calgary to Edmonton, and to cover that part of the road meant to them 35 days of wagon travel. She was a pioneer in the true sense of the word. She had seen the half-breed rebellion of 1885. When immigration brought more people into the St. Albert District the Latulippe house became a kind of stopping place, and numerous are the settlers who found from the deceased, relief and consolation in words and deeds.

Even in election times she proved a factor. It was a pleasure to hear her state, in her own picturesque language, her experiences during the political campaigns, and in all matters connected with the life and development of this country as it has been during the last quarter of a century. Her memory will live amongst those who came in contact with her, for she was clever, kind-hearted and genial, and did possible as much as any other person in the pioneering days for the good of Alberta.

She was a cousin of the late Ludger Laveray, in his day one of the leading French-Canadians of Montreal and of the Reverend Father Harnois, O.M.I. To mourn her loss she leaves a husband and five children. Her funeral will take place on Tuesday at ten o'clock in the morning at the Roman Catholic Cathedral in the town of St. Albert.

HAD UNPLEASANT NIGHT.

London, Aug. 29.—The Queens Own Rifles spent an unpleasant night in Camp at Rushmore owing to the inclement weather but to-day there is a pleasant change.

Didn't Know.

"When are you going to pay me for those wigs you had from me two years ago?" asked the anxious stage costumier. "Laddie," replied the man of tragedy, "I'm an actor, not a prophet."
